New Mégane R.S. to break cover at the Monaco Formula 1 Grand Prix

- The Monaco F1 Grand Prix weekend will see New Mégane R.S. make its first public appearance around the Principality's famous street track on May 26 in the hands of Nico Hülkenberg.
- Mégane R.S. will sport a yellow and black livery to mark Renault Sport's colours.
- New Mégane R.S. will be unveiled at next September's Frankfurt Motor Show.

Les Ulis, May 22 – Since 2004, the successive generations of Mégane R.S. have provided their owners with landmark innovations and technologies, from independent steering axis front suspension and a choice of Sport and Cup chassis, to Recaro bucket seats, Brembo brake callipers and R.S. Monitor, etc. Renault Sport's staff are continually exploring new frontiers when it comes to providing customers with exceptional suspension and engine performance, along with aerodynamics honed for efficiency and the best of F1 technology. The successive generations of Mégane R.S. have all stood out as benchmarks in the compact sports car class.

Renault Sport's road car range has long been driven by the experience Renault has forged in Formula 1 over the past four decades. The three generations of its flagship model – the Mégane R.S. – have featured a raft of advanced technologies for almost 15 years.

Due to be unveiled officially at next September's Frankfurt Motor Show in Germany, New Mégane R.S. is poised to break cover in Monaco on Friday, May 26, in the hands of Nico Hülkenberg. For the occasion, the car will sport a yellow and black livery to mark the 40th anniversary of Renault's involvement in Formula 1.
